

- What do I want to learn or understand better?

During this second week I have continued to learn about Scrum. Something that we have yet to use in our agile process is the concept of story points. However, we have been quite good at estimating how much time that is needed for each user story anyway. I would want to learn more and try using the story point system to see if we get even better estimates or if it leads to us being even more productive.

- How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

During the next couple of sprints we will encounter things and problems that no one of us has worked with previously. Therefore I will try to be as helpful as possible and do a lot of research in hopes of finding information that will enable us to move forward. Other than that I don't feel like there is anything I can teach the others at this given time.

- What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

I participate in every meeting and try to stick to the Scrum way of working. If I have a question regarding Scrum or if I feel that we might not use Scrum in the correct way, I am vocal about it.

- What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week I worked on the back-end side of things. I helped design and implement the user login database, which went great and it is now up and running. The work included both research of a fitting database provider/service and the implementation of it once we had found a fitting service.
